Ken Cole concludes 31-year career as news dealer

By NANCY GARRETT
Independent Editor

For more than 31 years, Kenny Cole rose before dawn and delivered morning paper to the doorsteps of local residents.

By 6 or 7 a.m. he opened the door to Cole's Newsstand and the long day of providing a service for Marshall residents had begun.

Cole, who recently retired from the news business which he entered in 1949, has sold the newsstand on Archer Avenue, to Gene and Valary Hamilton of Marshall.

Unlike most people, who have a couple of days a week "Off," Cole worked seven days a week, 365 days a year during his career.

"There was always a paper to deliver or pick up," he said, chewing on his cigar. "The only concession we made was to close at noon on Christmas."

Cole "inherited" hsi work from his father, who operated the newsstand at the corner of Archer and Sixth. Ken assumed the business in 1949 and moved it to its present location about 15 years later. 1964–1980

"We've had hundreds of paperboys over the years," he recalled. "I've often thought that we should have kept a list and kept track of what the boys are doing now. You don't think about things like that until it's too late."

When Cole began distributing papers and operating his newsstand, the price of the Terre Haute Star was 85 cents a month. Now, it costs about $5.

"Prices for the papers have really gone up," he said. He noted the Chicago Tribune was $1.05 a month and now the paper costs about $8. "You could buy a Chicago Sun Times for a nickle on Sunday and a Tribune for 20 cents. It's a dollar now," he noted.

Despite the rising prices, Cole believes newspapers will always have a place in the American home and are still "a bargain."

"A newspaper has something for everyone in it," he said. "The Chicago Tribune's Sunday paper is one of the best and so is it's daily paper. It takes a long time to read the whole thing, but after you do, then you known what's happening."

Cole admits his customers are a bit older and "sometimes I used to worry that the younger adults weren't reading papers like they should."

Lately, however, Cole noted he has a lot of younger people taking the papers. "When we lose an older subscriber, it never fails that someone else takes up the slack," he said.

"Really, newspapers are like gasoline," he observed. "You really can't get along without them and get around very well."

Not only did Cole deliver papers to the doorsteps of local residents, but he established a "box" system where regular customers could receive their papers even if the remainder of the counter papers were sold out. In 1978, when nearly every other business was paralyzed, Cole noted his newstand was open for business.

"I've had the best helper all these years," he said. His wife, Helen, delivered papers with him and when he was ill this past year, she ran the newsstand. The couple have two children, Ralph Cole and Mrs. Barbara Pitts, and two grandsons, Robert and David Pitts.

Ellen

"I don't have any idea how many thousands of papers Helen and I have delivered," he said. The only concession they made over the years was using a moped instead of a bicycle or car. "I love to ride my moped," he said.

"We're going to get some riding in now that I'm retired."

The Hamilton's took over Nov. 24, but Cole is continuing to come into the newsstand to help out although now he can "sleep in."

"Time was when I would open this place at 6 or 7 a.m. and wouldn't close until after midnight," he said. "I'm going to miss the friends we've made. That's really been the best thing all of these years–the people."
